Peek Inside the Book

All that I would like to be is human, having a share in a civilized, articulate and well-adjusted community where the mind is given its due but the body is not distrusted Louis MacNeice, Autumn...

I cannot drug my life with the present moment; The present moment may rape--but all in vain--The future, for the future remains a virgin Who must be tried again. Louis MacNeice, Autumn Journal //

Reader's Opinions

MacNeice is often sneered at as a lesser member of the Auden/Day Lewis coterie, and unfavourably compared with other "Irish" poets, but I have a genuine love of this window into his private thoughts in response to the great events of 1938-9 and reflections on things "back home" in...

I needed to listen to this strange and sad journalistic poetry. Like it was great timing, seasonally, but also because so much of late 30s Europe feels relateable to current events...
