

BEAUTY RISING

"My heart sank. I dumped my father's ashes in the heart of communist Vietnam – over a thousand miles from the death of his comrades – over a thousand miles from the smile of that girl. How could I have been so stupid?" Only the bumbling, overweight, thirtyish, stay-at-home Martin Kinney could have mistakenly flubbed his dying father's request with such gusto. This thousand mile mistake awakens the ghosts of...

Reader's Opinions

I received this book through first reads.... thank you bunches for that.This is a beautiful late coming-of-age story that is about "real life" situations. The ending was much appreciated and went well with the telling of the...
