

ARE YOU LISTENING? A PERSONAL JOURNAL OF AN OVARIAN CANCER SURVIVOR

Cancer snuck up on me when I least expected it. But I imagine everyone probably feels that way. When I got my diagnosis, I was relatively young and otherwise healthy. I was a busy mom, wife, employee and aspiring author. Priorities shifted, and so did my perspective. Throughout my experience, I sought to become educated and I learned many things – some tangible, some intangible, but all of which I'll share with you...

Reader's Opinions

Ok, so I'm really not a reader of non-fiction, but I'm a woman, and I consider Michelle to be a friend and wanted to help her get her message out. I don't really know what I was expecting from this short selection of journal entries, written during the diagnosis and treatment of Michelle's cancer. Something sad? A little depressing?...

What do you do when you think you may be ill? What do you do when you know for sure? What do you do when you hear you have cancer? What do you do when you already know Ovarian Cancer as a killer in your family? And how do you face each day wondering how and if...
